OBJECTIVES

- To study the substantive law in relation to female sexual offences in India
- To study the procedural law to find its compatibility level with the victim and the offender
- To study the implementation of the legislation by its authorities.
- To study case laws and recent cases of female sexual violence and to understand its causes and prevention.
- To study the reasons for Indian legislation not differentiating between major and minor rape
- To evaluate the work of the committees and commissions which examined the provisions of our Criminal Law and suggested a change; (latest Justice Verma committee report)
- To propose what changes need to be made in the system of implementation and interpretation of Indian legislation in relation to female sexual offences in India