Objectives of the Study

1. To study the existing practices of manpower planning in correctional institutions and review them in the light of desirable goals and objectives.

2. To identify different approaches to the planning of manpower of the convicts in the correctional institutions and understand their characteristics, merits and limitations from the point of view of their applicability in specific situations.

3. To examine the potential utilization of convicts as productive usefulness jointly and establish methodologies for realizing the same.

4. To prepare inmate for gradual acceptance by and absorption into the social and economic environment he will face after release.

5. To suggest measures to improve the manpower planning of convicts in the correctional institutions in terms of policies, strategies, plans, organizational framework and support systems and lay down methods of monitoring and evaluation.