HYPOTHESIS

The development of leading companies in India plays a key role in development of industrial sector of the country. However, the capital structure has an important role in determining the profitability and financial strength of a concern. Unfortunately, due to certain problems, the development of corporate sector has not attained the desired needs of the country. It is, therefore, hypothesized that the capital structure of the companies under study is not proper and needs restructuring.